

A Resource Developed by PTA Advocates

On Education Funding by Washington State

---

At the start of your school year, did certain questions seem all too familiar?

- Why is my kid's class size so large?
- Why doesn't my school have a librarian, counselor or nurse?
- Why can't kids bring their textbooks home to study?
  - Why aren't there more electives for kids to take?
  - Why aren't the athletic facilities better maintained?
  - Why can't the school bus take kids home from their after-school activities?

We know that the lack of dollars has something to do with the answers.

But, why? Is the shortfall at the district or state level? Is it just our school district, or is the problem widespread? Is anyone doing anything about it? What can we do?

The bad news: Groups of us dug deep to get to the bottom of the money issue and found that our state's K-12 public school funding is in a crisis.

The good news: After years of neglect, the state is finally drafting a plan to get our schools out of the budget hole.

The governor's Joint Task Force on Basic Ed Finance is about to release its proposal for how all kids can receive an education preparing them for the 21st century.

The 2009 legislative session could launch their plan. . . .

with a lot of help from people like us to –

Encourage all our state legislators to seriously consider properly funding our schools per the mandate in our state's constitution, "It is the paramount duty of the state to make ample provision for the education of all children . . . ."

---

If you would like to learn more about school funding news, and you want to be prepared to speak up for your school...

while feeling assured the info is documented with sources you can check, visit . . .

www.fundingwaschools.org

Share all we've invested in researching studies, collecting data, and attending meetings where officials and policymakers have debated the funding and future of K-12 education.

Be ready to judge for yourself what a good funding plan looks like - speak up for our kids and end your worries about your kids' options for their future.